Some Central Public Sector Undertakings are in the process of obtaining ISO-9000 certification. For organisations engaged in export activity, conformance to this standard can facilitate increased export opportunities. Certification is done through accredited certification agencies operating in the country. Organisations interested in obtaining ISO certification have to approach one of these accredited agencies and follow the systems and procedures laid down by them. For the service rendered, the agency charges a fee.

I would also like to know from the hon. Minster whether the system of self-certificaiton will be implemented in respect of major Indian exporting companies because today there is so much of corruption in that area. ...(Interruptions).... These exporting companies have hassles. There are thousands of items which are being exported. (Interruptions)... If the system of self-certification is there, it will help the export of various items. (Interruptions).... I would like to know if any particular Indian public sector company has got into the ISO-9000 or not and what the steps are...(Interruptions)... that the Government is taking to bring in ISO-9000 certification. This is my first supplementary. (Interruptions)...

SHRI P.K. THUNGON: We know the period ....(Interruptions).... So far as the period is concerned, it is three years... (Interruptions)...

SHRI JOHN F.
